Letter from the Chairman

Welcome to Washington DC. On behalf of YPO-WPO, our great professional staff, Pat, Bill and me, we want to extend to you our warmest embrace.

Welcome to the world of rough and tumble politics, up close and personal. We will do our best to ward off the political jabs and punches, but you should be prepared for mud wrestling at its finest. Remember, in Washington, if you want a friend, buy a dog.

We meet at a time of global tragedies, transnational events and episodes, change of governments, emerging democracies and global financial challenges. It is an extraordinary time for the world and as the most powerful nation and leading democracy on earth, it is particularly challenging. We will join with other great minds to explore these and other subjects, at a very high level as we look at the underlying causes and the current and future possibilities for our Nation. Our speakers will be the leading experts in many of these areas and we will dialogue with them regarding their views on these most important topics.

We invite you to ask penetrating questions and to follow up when appropriate. We will schedule sufficient time for dialogue with our resources. We ask that you be prompt, pay attention and dress in Washington business attire. I know we will have a wonderful and illuminating time together.

Welcome and best wishes,

Warren Rustand
Chairman, WPO Washington Seminar

THE HONORABLE JAMES E. CLYBURN

President Barack Obama has said he is, “One of a handful of people who, when they speak, the entire Congress listens.” As Assistant Democratic Leader in the 112th Congress, the number three Democrat in the House, James E. Clyburn is the leadership liaison to the Appropriations Committee and one of the Democratic Caucus’ primary liaisons to the White House. Working with the internal caucuses, he plays a prominent role in messaging and outreach.

His humble beginnings in Sumter South Carolina, as the eldest son of an activist fundamentalist minister and an independent civic-minded beautician, grounded him securely in family, faith and public service. He was elected president of his NAACP youth chapter when he was 12-years old, helped organize many civil rights marches and demonstrations as a student leader at South Carolina State College, and even met his wife, Emily, in jail during one of his incarcerations.

When Clyburn came to Congress in 1993, he was elected co-President of his Freshman class and quickly rose through leadership ranks. He was elected Chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus in 1999, and his reputation as a leader and consensus-builder helped him win a difficult three-way race for House Democratic Caucus Vice Chair in 2002. Three years later, he was unanimously elected Chair of the Democratic Caucus. When Democrats regained the House majority in 2006, Congressman Clyburn was elevated by his colleagues to House Majority Whip.

As a national leader he has worked to respond to the needs of America’s diverse communities. He championed rural communities supporting regional water projects, community health centers and broadband connections. He has supported higher education by leading the charge for increased Pell grants, and has encouraged economic development by securing funding for Empowerment Zones and investing in green technology. Clyburn was instrumental in advancing into law measures to resolve historic discrimination issues, significantly reducing the statutory disparity in sentencing and compensating African and Native Americans.

SENATOR BOB CORKER

Bob Corker grew up in Chattanooga, Tennessee. He attended public schools, played sports and from an early age, learned to love and value hard work. He took his first job at age 13 picking up trash and spent his teenage years bagging ice, working at the Western Auto and putting in long hours as a construction laborer.

Bob graduated from the University of Tennessee in 1974 with a degree in Industrial Management, and after working four years as a construction superintendent, he started his own construction company with $8,000. The company grew as it quickly gained a reputation for meeting deadlines on time and under budget and eventually expanded to operations in 18 states. Over time, Bob's business interests evolved to acquiring and developing commercial real estate. After traveling with his church on a mission trip to Haiti in his late twenties, Bob began to take a closer look at needs in his own community. He led the creation of Chattanooga Neighborhood Enterprise, a non-profit organization that today has helped more than 10,000 families secure decent, fit and affordable housing through low-interest loans.

In 1994, Bob was appointed Tennessee commissioner of Finance and Administration, where he served for two years in the highest appointed office in state government. As commissioner, he tightened the state's budget and helped move almost 40,000 Tennesseans off welfare and into jobs.

In 2001, Bob was elected mayor of Chattanooga. He transformed Chattanooga's waterfront — attracting $2.1 billion of investment to revitalize the city, implemented merit bonus pay for teachers which dramatically raised student achievement in some of the city's most challenged schools, and worked with local law enforcement officials to cut violent crime in half.

On November 7, 2006, Bob Corker was elected to serve the people of Tennessee in the United States Senate. He is a member of the Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee, the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, the Foreign Relations Committee and ranking member of the Special Committee on Aging.

MAYOR ADRIAN FENTY

Adrian Fenty has become a national leader in the area of urban education reform after changing the city's public schools structure in his first months in office.

One of the youngest mayors of a major metropolitan U.S. city, rising political figure Adrian Fenty captured the nation's attention during his term as Mayor of the District of Columbia. Celebrated for his leadership in urban education reform, the public school system in DC had been troubled for years with poor student test performance scores and graduation rates among the lowest in the nation. During his first months in office, he shocked the city — and the nation — by bringing the public school system under his administration's control. That bold move and the addition of Michelle Rhee as Chancellor of Schools have credited Fenty with putting the school system on the path to long-awaited improvements inside and outside the classroom. The results speak for themselves — student achievement at the secondary level rose 14 points in reading and 17 points in math since 2007 — gains that are unprecedented in DC history and unparalleled nationwide.

While focusing on improving schools, the Fenty Administration is also recognized for overhauling District agencies, ensuring more efficient and effective service delivery throughout city government. Government efficiency and accountability are among the key hallmarks of Fenty's work as Mayor. He added more police officers to patrol the streets; added thousands of affordable housing units; and improved the delivery of emergency medical services. As a result, homicides dropped to their lowest level since the 1960s. Fenty also championed development efforts across the city. Several schools, libraries, parks and recreation centers were renovated to offer state-of-the-art facilities for residents. Mayor Fenty again made history by signing the Religious Freedom and Civil Marriage Equality Act of 2009 to legalize same-sex marriage in the District of Columbia.

Fenty is a graduate of Oberlin College and earned a Juris Doctorate from Howard University Law School. He resides in DC with his wife, Michelle, and three children.
